PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

Ben C. Clyburn, Chief Judge of the District Court of Maryland; Barbara Baer Waxman, Administrative Judge for the District Court of Maryland for Baltimore City; David W. Weissert, Coordinator of Commissioner Activity for the District Court of Maryland; Linda Lewis, Administrative Commissioner for the District Court of Maryland for Baltimore City; and the Commissioners of the District Court of Maryland for Baltimore City (the “District Court Defendants”), through counsel, respectfully petition for a writ of certiorari to review the injunction entered by the Circuit Court for Baltimore City on January 10, 2014 (as amended by an order entered January 13, 2014) in Quinton Richmond, et al. v. District Court of Maryland, Case No. 24-C-06-009911.¹ Exercise of this Court's jurisdiction is warranted to act on the District Court Defendants' contemporaneously-filed motion to stay the effect of the circuit court's injunction and to ensure the orderly conduct of initial appearances in accordance with rules adopted by this Court.

¹ A copy of the circuit court docket is provided in the appendix to this petition. The docket entries evidencing the orders imposing an injunction, from which this appeal has been taken, are found at App. 27. The judgment of the circuit court adjudicated all claims in the action in their entirety. The District Court Defendants noted their appeals on January 13, 2014 (notice attached at App. 38). No briefing order has been issued by the Court of Special Appeals.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Did the circuit court err in entering an injunction directing officials of the District Court to conduct initial appearances in a manner inconsistent with the existing rules promulgated by this Court?

2. Did the circuit court err in granting an application for supplemental relief based on a prior declaratory judgment without first issuing a show cause order, as required by the statute governing such applications?

3. Did the circuit court err in ordering officials of the District Court to appoint counsel for all arrestees at initial appearances and prohibiting those court officials from conducting initial appearances for arrestees who were not provided with counsel?

PERTINENT PROVISIONS

Md. Code Ann., Cts. & Jud. Proc. § 3-412

Rule 4-216

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This case is one with which the Court is already well-acquainted, through the exercise of both the Court's adjudicative and its legislative functions. The case has generated three opinions by this Court and has been the subject of multiple rules orders. The Court's rulings have led to the creation of two task forces tasked with studying policy reforms necessary to implement those rulings. Both the judicial task force commissioned by this Court and the task force created by the General Assembly have recently issued detailed reports recommending far-reaching policy changes, and the leadership of the General Assembly has signaled that consideration of these proposals will be a key priority in the upcoming legislative session. This Court has acknowledged the complex logistical and fiscal challenges that policymakers will have to confront in order to respond to the Court's ruling. The circuit court's injunction, by contrast, disregards these complexities, just as that court disregarded the procedures this Court spelled out in its January 2012 opinion and its November 6, 2013 orders.

Under the procedures anticipated by this Court's orders, the circuit court was expected to entertain an application for further relief based on the declaratory judgment it issued pursuant to this Court's mandate. This Court's November 6 rules order adopting provisional changes to the rules governing initial appearances declined to make those rules changes effective without further action by this Court. The order issued the same day, denying the State of Maryland's motion to stay the Court's judgment in this case, directed that the concerns raised by the State in its motion instead should be presented to the circuit court in the first instance. The order also expressly identified the procedural mechanism that would allow the circuit court to tailor a remedy to the circumstances, taking into account the substantial fiscal and operational challenges associated with adapting the State's existing pretrial procedures to accommodate the newly-declared right to counsel announced in this Court's September 25 opinion.

The District Court Defendants advised the circuit court of the actions taken by this Court in a status report submitted on November 14. (App. 26, No. 00102000.) The status report informed the circuit court that the District Court Defendants would continue to comply with the existing rules promulgated by this Court to govern initial appearances, based on their understanding that this Court anticipated that further proceedings in the circuit court would precede implementation of the amended rules governing initial appearances. The status report explained that this Court's November 6 order and its January 2012 opinion had prescribed the manner of those proceedings, to be commenced by an application for further relief based on a declaratory judgment, in accordance with § 3-412 of the Courts and Judicial Proceedings Article. The status report further explained the procedure to be followed under this provision:

Section 3-412 allows the request for further relief to be made "either in a separate action or by application to a court [that] retains jurisdiction" after awarding declaratory relief. Nova Research, Inc. v. Penske Truck Leasing Co., 405 Md. 435, 458 (2008). Once the action has been initiated, the court, "on reasonable notice," may require "any adverse party whose rights have been adjudicated by the declaratory judgment or decree to show cause why further relief should not be granted." Md. Code Ann., Cts. & Jud. Proc. § 3-412(c).

Status Report (Nov. 14, 2013) at 6 n.*.

On December 5, 2013, the plaintiffs initiated the procedures contemplated by this Court's November 6 order, by filing a petition for further relief based on the declaratory judgment the circuit court had entered on November 7. (App. 27, No. 00105000.) In their petition, the plaintiffs noted the parties' agreement that "the Court of Appeals anticipated further proceedings in [the circuit court]" and that "the Court of Appeals has directed that the implementation of the new Rules will be triggered by further action by [the circuit court] pursuant to a petition for further relief pursuant to CJP § 3-412." Memorandum in Support of Petition for Further Relief, at 3. On January 8, 2014, plaintiffs' counsel wrote a letter to the presiding circuit court judge to "inquire about the status" of the plaintiffs' petition under § 3-412. In the letter, they advised the court that "[t]he procedure for moving forward is clearly laid out in the Declaratory Judgment Act. Citing § 3-412(c), plaintiffs' counsel stated, "The first step . . . is for the Court to issue the Order to Show Cause."

The circuit court did not, however, follow the procedure specified by § 3-412 by issuing a show cause order directing the District Court Defendants to respond to the plaintiffs' application for further relief. Instead, on January 10, the circuit court entered an injunction requiring the District Court Defendants to "appoint counsel for Plaintiffs at all initial bail hearings." (App. 27, No. 00105002, App. 32-33.) The order further stated that "the District Court Defendants are hereby PROHIBITED AND ENJOINED from a) conducting initial bail hearings without appointing counsel for Plaintiffs and/or b) directing the incarceration of any Plaintiffs who have not been provided counsel at such hearings. (App. 33.) Although the parties had advised the circuit court that the provisional rules adopted by this Court to authorize the appointment of counsel and to accommodate their presence at initial appearances would not take effect until a further order by this Court, the circuit court's January 10 injunction stated that "this Order shall take effect IMMEDIATELY." (App. 33.) Counsel for the District Court Defendants received a copy of the order in the mail on January 13.² (App. 35.)

The District Court Defendants noted their appeal of the injunction later the same day. (App. 38.)

REASONS FOR GRANTING REVIEW

This Court's intervention is required to correct circuit court's precipitous action in issuing an over-broad injunction with immediate effect, notwithstanding this Court's determination that the provisional rules it adopted on November 6, 2013 would not become effective without further action by this Court. The result is that the District Court Defendants are subject to conflicting commands. They must abide by the existing procedures promulgated by this Court, which do not contemplate having counsel present at an arrestee's initial appearance before a commissioner of the District Court. At the same time, the circuit court's order prohibits them from conducting initial appearances in Baltimore City without appointing counsel, though the procedures selected by this Court for making such appointments have not been made effective and the funding mechanism

² Later that day, plaintiffs' counsel informed counsel for the District Court Defendants that the circuit court had issued an amended order that had been entered that day. (App. 36.) The terms of the injunction were not altered. The only apparent difference is that the amended order includes Judge John R. Hargrove, Jr. among the list of District Court officials who are subject to the injunction. (Plaintiffs' counsel have advised that they will file a notice under Rule 2-231(a)(5) to reflect the substitution of Judge Barbara Baer Waxman for Judge Hargrove, whom she has succeeded as Administrative Judge of the District Court for Baltimore City.)

suggested by the Rules Committee for compensating the lawyers does not presently exist. (One piece of the provisional rules adopted on November 6 has been given effect by Chief Judge Barbera's November 26, 2013 administrative order requiring District Administrative Judges to begin compiling a list of private attorneys who would be willing to serve on a standby basis, but the circuit court made no effort to ensure that enough qualified private attorneys would be available to provide representation at the hundreds of initial appearances conducted in Baltimore City each week.)

The broad terms of the circuit court's injunction not only are inconsistent with the existing rules promulgated by this Court to govern initial appearances; the injunction's terms also conflict with the provisional rules that this Court has proposed to make effective upon a future order of the Court. Among other things, those rules amendments would authorize commissioners to conduct waiver inquiries before continuing with the initial appearance, an authority that the commissioners presently lack. But the injunction mandates that counsel be provided at all initial appearances, without making any allowance for arrestees who elect to proceed without the assistance of counsel. In this respect, the injunction also exceeds the terms of the declaratory judgment it purports to enforce. The declaratory judgment entered by the circuit court (in the form proposed by the plaintiffs) states that an arrestee's rights are violated by "continuing with the bail hearing once [an arrestee has] requested representation." (App. 42.) The injunction requires counsel to be appointed, whether the arrestee wants representation or not.

To make matters worse, the terms of the injunction are incompatible with statutes governing an arrestee's entitlement to release by a commissioner. For many categories of offenses, a commissioner lacks authority to set the conditions of release, and the initial appearance therefore concludes with the commissioner committing the arrestee to the continued custody of officials at the Division of Pretrial Services in Baltimore City, pending a determination by a judge. The terms of the injunction, however, apply to all members of the plaintiff class of arrestees presented to a District Court commissioner in Baltimore City, and those terms prohibit commissioners from “directing the incarceration of any Plaintiffs” (App. 37) who were not provided with counsel for their appearance before a commissioner (even though they will be provided with counsel when they see the judge).

For all of these reasons, the Court should, at a minimum, enter an immediate stay of the circuit court’s injunction, as requested in the District Court Defendants’ motion under Rule 8-303(e), which is being filed at the same time as this petition. The same reasons justify the Court in disposing of the petition, after the plaintiffs have had an opportunity to respond, by summarily vacating and reversing the circuit court’s injunction.

The circuit court’s injunction should be vacated and reversed for the further reason that the circuit court erred in granting the plaintiffs’ application under § 3-412 without first issuing a show cause order. The circuit court had previously denied the plaintiffs’ plea for injunctive relief, at their invitation, and the court had proceeded to enter a final judgment disposing of all claims, by entering a declaratory judgment pursuant to this Court’s mandate. The plaintiffs had successfully argued that the circuit court’s previous denial of injunctive relief would not be a bar to a future request, and this Court, in its

January 2012 opinion, agreed that the vehicle for seeking such future relief was the procedure set forth by § 3-412.

The circuit court was advised by both the plaintiffs and the District Court Defendants that this Court's rulings anticipated further proceedings conducted in accordance with § 3-412. Both sets of parties informed the Court that such proceedings are initiated by an application (or the filing of a new action), followed by the court's issuance, "on reasonable notice," of a show cause order directing an adverse party to respond to the demand for further relief. The plaintiffs invoked these procedures by filing a petition under § 3-412; then, last week, their counsel correctly advised the circuit court that "[t]he first step . . . is for the Court to issue the Order to Show Cause." Instead, the circuit court issued its injunction, hastily terminating the proceedings contemplated in this Court's November 6 order without giving itself the opportunity to obtain the information that would have allowed the court to tailor any remedy. The circuit court's precipitous action blinded itself to the complex challenges, faced by all three branches of government, as they grapple with the policy implications of adapting the existing pretrial system to accommodate the newly-declared right to counsel at initial appearances.

Had the circuit court followed the procedures set forth in § 3-412, it likely would have avoided committing the plain substantive errors discussed above. Those procedures would also have allowed the circuit court to satisfy this Court's expectation that the concerns raised by the State in its October 25 stay motion could be considered in fashioning an appropriate remedy. At the very least, the District Court Defendants could have told the circuit court that any injunction should be structured to take effect only upon the further order of this Court making the provisional implementing rules amendments effective. Instead, the circuit court entered an injunction with immediate effect, preempting the authority reserved by this Court to decide when its amended rules should become effective. The circuit court's failure to follow the procedures set forth in § 3-412 present a further basis for this Court to summarily vacate and reverse the injunction entered by the circuit court, so that it may hear arguments from the District Court Defendants and other interested parties, as this Court intended.

By entering an injunction without careful consideration, the circuit court defeated the clearly-expressed expectations of this Court that concerns about the logistical and fiscal challenges of implementing the Court's decision would be presented in the first instance to the circuit court. Summary reversal, with instructions to follow the procedures set forth in § 3-412, would ensure that this Court's review of the terms of any future injunction (if any party were aggrieved by its terms) would be aided by a more complete record. The Court may determine, however, that further proceedings in the circuit court would not be beneficial after all. Both task forces have now issued reports recommending substantial changes to the existing pretrial system, suggesting that the implementation issues arising from this Court's decision are likely to be resolved in the legislative arena (whether through enactments by the General Assembly, adoption of new rules by this Court, or both). Also, the policy deliberations are at a more advanced stage than they were even a few months ago, when the Court determined that the parties' arguments concerning the best way to implement the circuit court's declaratory judgment should be presented to the circuit court in the first instance. If the Court determines that those arguments can in fact be resolved on the basis of appellate briefing and the existing record, then remand to the circuit court would likely serve only to delay an ultimate resolution of the controversy. In that event, the Court should grant the petition and undertake plenary review of the substantive challenges, by the District Court Defendants and other affected parties, to the relief ordered by the circuit court.

CONCLUSION

The Court should enter an immediate stay of the circuit court's injunction pending disposition of the petition for a writ of certiorari, and the petition should be granted. If the Court does not summarily vacate and reverse the circuit court's injunction and remand for further proceedings in compliance with § 3-412 of the Courts and Judicial Proceedings Article, the Court should place the appeal on the calendar for full briefing and argument on the merits of the relief ordered by the circuit court.

ORDER

Upon consideration of the Petition for Further Relief filed by Plaintiffs against certain Defendants, namely the Honorable Ben C. Clyburn, David Weissert, Linda Lewis, and the Commissioners of the District Court for Baltimore City (collectively, the “District Court Defendants”), any responses thereto by the parties, review of the court file, and this Court finding:

1. The Court of Appeals of Maryland definitively ruled that Plaintiffs are entitled to representation by counsel at the initial bail hearings under the due process clause of Article 24 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights, affirming this Court’s ruling of October 1, 2010, that Plaintiffs have a constitutional right to counsel under Article 24;
2. The Court of Appeals issued its mandate on October 13, 2013;
3. Pursuant to directive of the Court of Appeals, on October 23, 2013, this Court issued a Declaratory Judgment specifically finding that Plaintiffs have a right to counsel at initial bail hearings under Article 24 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights, and that the District Court Defendants have been violating that said right by failing to provide counsel;
4. The District Court Defendants moved to vacate this Court’s Declaratory Judgment, and this Court denied that motion on November 1, 2013;

It is this 10th day of January, 2014, by the Circuit Court for Baltimore City, hereby ORDERED, that the Plaintiffs' Petition for Further Relief is hereby GRANTED. And, ORDERED, that the District Court Defendants are to appoint counsel for Plaintiffs at all initial bail hearings. And, further,

ORDERED, that this Court finds that the grounds for a PERMANENT INJUNCTION have been SATISFIED. Further, it is ORDERED, that the District Court Defendants are hereby PROHIBITED AND ENJOINED from a) conducting initial bail hearings without appointing counsel for Plaintiffs, and/or b) directing the incarceration of any Plaintiffs who have not been provided counsel at such hearings. And,

ORDERED, that this Order shall take effect IMMEDIATELY.

DECLARATORY JUDGMENT

Upon consideration of the decision by the Court of Appeals of Maryland issued on September 26, 2013 affirming this Court's prior judgment declaring that Defendants' failure to provide counsel for Plaintiffs at initial bail hearings violates Plaintiffs' right to due process under Article 24 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights, and pursuant to that Order, it is this 23rd day of OCTOBER, 2013, by the Circuit Court for Baltimore City, hereby ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that Plaintiffs are indigent individuals who were arrested and detained at the Baltimore City Central Booking facility. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that Plaintiffs, individually, were brought before a Commissioner for an initial bail hearing while being held at the Central Booking facility. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that Plaintiffs, individually, requested to be represented by appointed counsel at the initial bail hearing. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that in the case of each Plaintiff, the Commissioner conducted the initial bail hearing for the purpose of determining Plaintiffs' eligibility for pretrial release without an appointed counsel present. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that the duty of the Office of the Public Defender, as mandated by the Public Defender Act, is to provide legal representation to indigent individuals. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that criminal suspects are brought before a Commissioner for an initial appearance and an initial hearing pursuant to Md. Rule 4-213. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that during the initial bail hearing, defendants appear before a Commissioner; are informed of each offense charged; informed of the allowable penalties, are released on their own recognizance, have bond set, or are committed to jail. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that the initial bail hearing determines whether a defendant will be allowed to retain, or forced to surrender, his liberty during the pendency of his criminal case. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that any stage that could result in a finding that would place the defendant in jeopardy of loss of liberty or being confined, the defendant is entitled to counsel, and to proceed with the matter after representation was requested is a violation of the constitutional right to due process. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that Article 24 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights provides that no person may be imprisoned or otherwise deprived of his liberty without due process and application of the law of the land. And,

ORDERED, DECREED AND ADJUDGED, that Defendants violated Plaintiffs' right to due process by continuing with the bail hearing once Plaintiffs requested representation.
